New Owner Mike McCrery Looks to the Future at 'Getaway Cubbie Grille' in Bridgman, Grand Opening Saturday

From 'fry guy' in Tosi's kitchen 28 years ago to new owner of the legendary 'Getaway Cubbie Bar & Grille' in Bridgman, Mike McCrery has been around the block in the restaurant and food service business. For the past nine years, McCrery has been the Executive Chef at Tosi's, in charge of the menu of the region's 85-year heritage fine dining establishment. And now—he owns a burger bar with a 70-year history of its own.

Mike McCrery is 'pumped'. He can't wait to put all that experience and expertise to work building on the legacy of The Getaway and bringing it back to a high level of quality, service and family-friendly fun. Mike took over last week and is gearing up with his new staff for a Grand Opening Celebration this Saturday, March 21. There'll be specials, prizes, surprises and a warm welcoming atmosphere that will continue to be built around the Chicago Cubs. "The Cubbie Grille" will still be the centerpiece every day at the Getaway, says Mike.

"We're still basing everything on the Cubs. We've got nicknamed Cubs on the menu with different items, and everything's got to play into the baseball theme. But the most important point is we're back to running fresh food, not all frozen stuff. I even put fresh fish on the menu again so people can come and enjoy!"

McCrery says The Getaway will land squarely in the middle of the area's excellent casual dining spots. Burgers are what helped make The Getaway famous, and they will continue to be a mainstay. But there will be lots of other choices:

"I've been working on the new menu over the past month, putting things together, talking with different vendors, getting specific things lined up. For instance, I put a T -bone back on the menu. The T -bone I'm getting from Fred's Meat Market in Coloma. They're cutting steaks for me to start. We'll certainly look at other great local meat markets, too. We'll always try to buy locally."

The Getaway Cubbie Grille menu is displayed below. Mike says he'll continue to fine tune and make changes as he discovers—or creates—new items.

"I've got fresh fish out of Chicago, the same supplier that we used at Tosi's. Over the next few weeks, I've got food shows coming up. I've got test kitchens coming up, where we're going to go and have corporate chefs show us some new ideas and something different for this kind of place. We're excited about the new Getaway!"

There will be a team of 22 people serving you at The Getaway, many of whom stayed on, plus several key staff members McCrery recruited from leading SW Michigan establishments.

At the bar Mike has 16 draft handles, with several set aside for local brews. One choice is a semi-exclusive Haymarket Session IPA "Throw It Back", only available three places: Haymarket's locations near Wrigley Field and in Bridgman, and at The Getaway.

McCrery says The Getaway was the perfect opportunity for him to 'make it on his own' after decades at Tosi's, owned by his brother Dan McCrery and family. He emphasizes that he is not trying to compete in that space and wants to make The Getaway the best family-friendly sports bar and comfort food restaurant around.

While his experience has been as a chef, Mike plans to oversee the kitchen from 'out front', meeting the public and building relationships with customers. He is proud to be taking over the reins from another long-time successful restaurant family, the Ackerman's, who operated The Getaway for two generations. Mike points out he has room for 99 customers right now, but looks forward to when he will need more seating:

"We're going to add a lot more seating outside this summer, and then I'd like to do some live music outside on the weekends. And there'll still always be the Cubs games on here at The Getaway!"

The Getaway is located at 9489 Red Arrow Highway, Bridgman 49106. More information at www.getawaycubbiebar.com or 269-465-5932.

SJ Commissioners approve scaled back paid parking

St. Joseph City Commissioners have approved a newly updated downtown paid parking plan for 2026.

sion, the city's parking subgroup spent the following months drafting a new proposal. It's greatly scaled back, with the number of paid spaces reduced from more than 800 to fewer than 200 and all on-street.

Commissioners officially considered the plan Monday night. Commissioner Michael Sarola opposed it, saying he doesn't sense buy-in from stakeholders.

"I just don't feel comfortable playing with the livelihood of the restaurateurs and merchants while we try to right-size this program because I can see right now -- I believe and that's all I have to vote -- there are things in this plan that are going to fail," Sarola said.

Sarola also suggested parking along Lake Boulevard be paid and not limited to three hours, questioned whether there would be adequate free parking for the 600-plus downtown business employees, and called for an annual pass option. He said while he supports paid parking as a concept, this wasn't the right plan.

Commissioner Lisa Vetne was also opposed to the proposal due to major construction projects about to get started in the city, like the reconstruction of Main Street next year. But Commissioner Michael Fernandez supported the plan, saying it will help the city better manage traffic and generate revenue for downtown improvements. He added it can be changed as commissioners see a need.

"I believe that we can do more than one thing at a time," Fernandez said. "I think that we've seen a lot of stagnation, and so there's certainly concerns and 'what if, what if', but if we never do the things that are necessary to develop ourselves, we will just simply never develop."

When Fernandez proposed a motion to approve the proposal, Commissioner Tess Ulrey suggested it be amended to instruct the parking subgroup to study the concept of an annual pass. That language was added. Mayor Brook Thomas also supported exploring the idea.

The proposal was then approved with Sarola and Vetne voting no. Public comment on the plan was largely negative.

You Say Baloney, I Say Blarney!

(Author's note: I interrupt my life's work of publishing columns about my trip to Egypt to mark a Holy Day of Ale-bligation.)

During this festive St. Patrick's Day week, I ruminated about any number of things Irish, such as that St. Paddy's party last year when I talked my friend Charlie into drinking some cheap swill while I enjoyed the last of a four-pack of Guinness stout.

I believe I succeeded that evening because I once kissed the Blarney Stone. The one in Blarney Castle, Ireland. I'm assuming everyone knows the legendary powers of the Blarney Stone – to bestow the gift of gab on anyone who kisses it.

Herewith, I offer a few Blarney Stone-related tidbits, none of which dwell on the fact that the Stone is permeated with the saliva from millions of kissers.

• On St. Patrick's Day 1939, at Texas Tech University, then-President of TTU, Clifford B. Jones, and then-President of TTU's Engineering Society, Dosh McCreary, unveiled the Blarney Stone monument, which sits to this day in front of the school's old Electrical Engineering Building. The rock was "discovered" by a group of petroleum engineering students on a field trip. They "analyzed" it after each had downed a four-pack of Guinness, and determined that it was "identical with a piece of the original Blarney Stone," which had supposedly disappeared from Blarney Castle in 1659.

Dosh McCreary made the following pronouncements at the unveiling: That only senior TTU engineering students would be allowed to kiss the stone; that kissing it would impart eloquence to them; which he then proved by turning to Clifford B. Jones and convincing him to give all engineering students the day off from classes.

• Geologists at the University of Glasgow, in Scotland, have described the makeup of the Blarney Sone in excruciatingly scientific detail. It's made up of a bunch of geological stuff, including "slightly deformed fragments of fossil brachiopod shells and bryozoans." (Bryozoans are sedentary aquatic invertebrates, "from the phylum that comprises the moss animals." Makes that Blarney Stone kiss all the more appetizing, doesn't it?)

Anyway, the Glasgow U researchers cast doubt on the TTU story, saying their slice of the Stone is probably the only additional piece that isn't still attached to the Castle. However, they at least offer this bit of whimsy: "We don't know if kissing the microscope slide will confer the gift of eloquence. But we have tried it."

• Some people aren't exactly clear on just what "blarney" is. It's not the same as "baloney"—there's a crucial difference. Signs at Blarney Castle explain it ever so well: "Baloney is flattery laid on so thick we hate it. Blarney is flattery laid on so thin we love it. Baloney is flattery laid on with a trowel. Blarney is flattery laid on with the lips." This is why the kissing bit is required.

Still don't get it? Consider this example: You tell a 50 year old woman "You look 25!" You're full of baloney. Now, I approach the same women and say: "I wish it were not impolite to ask when you were born; I would dearly love to know at what age a woman becomes so beautiful." I'm full of blarney!

And perhaps a couple pints of Guinness.

The Best Is Yet to Come

No one likes pain and suffering. I haven't heard of someone waking up with aches and a smile on their face. Some may do mental and spiritual exercises of prayer and thanksgiving to work through the pain. Or you may get the medications used to deaden the pain.

Organizations all over the world are chartered to alleviate suffering and pain. End hunger. Stop war. Stand up for injustice. Defeat cancer. Billions of dollars are spent to address suffering and pain. Parents attempt to sterilize the child from experiencing any pain in a vain attempt that does not prepare a child to endure adult difficulties. We adamantly declare, "Pain is bad!"

When you experience it, it is because you live in a world of suffering and sin. But it was not meant to be this way. Our desire to remove it should be like an internal flashing red light telling you, "I am not made for pain." God created the world to be perfect, but sin has wrecked that, yours, and the sin of others.

God doesn't avoid pain. Instead, God is a God who suffers. Jesus wasn't born into a comfortable lifestyle. He lived in poverty without the means to address much of the human suffering through status or money. Even in his miracles to remove people's pain, he didn't heal everyone. In fact, one of the accounts of those miracles (raising of his beloved friend, Lazarus. John 10), he still wept and felt emotional pain before bringing him back to life.

Jesus endured one of the most painful ways to die in all human history. He was flogged and crucified by experts in torture. The physical pain only scratches the surface of the emotional and spiritual pain he endured because of condemnation for all the crimes of the world. When you hurt, he hurts too.

But it didn't end in pain. Three days later he was raised to life proving that sin, pain, and death do not win. Life wins. By his life, death, and resurrection, Jesus promises you to receive eternal life, not death. Jesus is preparing place where there will be no more suffering, a place of glory.

For I conclude that our sufferings at the present time are not worth comparing with the glory that is going to be revealed to us. (Romans 8:18).

At the end of all the suffering, glory waits in heaven. When comparing the suffering you have here with the glory that is going to be in heaven, the joys and glory of heaven far outweigh what we experience here.

Like a marathon runner who trains hard just to have the satisfaction of finishing a long race, you will be satisfied at the end of life with never-ending joy and bliss. God has a place waiting for you in heaven. It is all won by Jesus Christ. What you experience now pales in comparison to the joy that waits you in heaven.

Keep your eyes up, the best is yet to come.

Prayer: Dear Lord. Pain is hard. I don't like it. You don't like it. Help me endure as you prepare heaven for me where there will be no more pain. What a great place it will be. Amen.

The Detroit Tigers: A Century-Plus of Baseball Excellence and Resilience

The Detroit Tigers stand as one of Major League Baseball's oldest continuous franchises, with origins dating to 1894 when the team formed as part of the minor Western League in Detroit. By 1901, they joined the newly established American League as a charter member, debuting with a thrilling 14-13 comeback victory against the Milwaukee Brewers. Initially playing at Bennett Park, the team adopted the Tigers nickname, possibly inspired by striped uniforms or a local military unit, and introduced an early mascot emblem on their caps.

The early 20th century marked the Ty Cobb era, beginning in 1905 when the young outfielder joined the roster. Under his influence, alongside players like Sam Crawford and manager Hughie Jennings, the Tigers captured American League pennants in 1907, 1908, and 1909, though they fell short in the World Series each time—losing to the Chicago Cubs twice and the Pittsburgh Pirates once. Cobb's remarkable achievements included multiple batting titles, a .420 average in 1911, and a record 96 stolen bases in 1915. The 1915 squad achieved 100 wins, boasting one of baseball's finest outfields. Later, as player-manager from 1921 to 1926, Cobb oversaw strong offensive outputs, including league records for hits and batting average in 1921, but no additional pennants.

A resurgence arrived in the 1930s with the arrival of Hank Greenberg and player-manager Mickey Cochrane. The 1934 team posted a franchise-best 101 wins and .656 winning percentage but lost the World Series to the St. Louis Cardinals. Triumph followed in 1935, when Greenberg's MVP season (36 home runs, 168 RBIs) and contributions from Charlie Gehringer and Goose Goslin propelled the Tigers to their first World Series title, defeating the Cubs 4-2. Another pennant came in 1940, led by Greenberg's second MVP performance, though they lost to the Cincinnati Reds. Amid World War II, pitcher Hal Newhouser earned back-to-back MVPs in 1944 and 1945, guiding the team to a second championship over the Cubs in 1945.

Postwar years brought a prolonged drought from 1946 to 1967, with consistent but pennant-less seasons. Highlights included Newhouser's 26 wins in 1946 and Al Kaline's emergence as a star after debuting in 1953. The 1961 club won 101 games but finished second. Momentum built in the late 1960s, culminating in the 1968 World Series victory over the Cardinals, powered by Denny McLain's 31 wins and Mickey Lolich's three complete games.

The 1980s ushered in the "Bless You Boys" era under manager Sparky Anderson. The 1984 squad set a franchise record with 104 wins and claimed the World Series against the San Diego Padres, featuring Alan Trammell and Kirk Gibson. They added an AL East title in 1987 but lost in the playoffs. The 1990s and early 2000s saw struggles, including a dismal 43-119 record in 2003. Rebuilding under Dave Dombrowski yielded a 2006 AL pennant and World Series appearance, though they lost to the Cardinals. Division titles followed in 2011-2014, with Miguel Cabrera's 2012 Triple Crown and Justin Verlander's MVP/Cy Young honors. Pennants in 2012 and another World Series berth highlighted the era, but no titles.

Recent decades have featured inconsistency, with losing seasons from 2015 to 2023, including 47-114 in 2019. A turnaround began in 2024 with an 86-76 wild-card berth, sweeping the Houston Astros before falling in the Division Series. In 2025, an 87-75 finish secured another wild card, but playoff elimination ensued. Now playing at Comerica Park since 2000, the Tigers boast four World Series titles, 11 AL pennants, and a legacy of Hall of Famers like Cobb, Greenberg, Kaline, and Trammell, embodying Detroit's resilient spirit through industrial booms, social challenges, and baseball highs.

Pet Lover

The Pet Corner

If you're like me, one of your favorite comic strips is called simply Mutts. Reading about the antics of the pets in Mutts will brighten a dark day. Besides being funny, the strip often deals with pet rescue and pet adoptions. Recently, I discovered a Mutts sponsored page called Helping Pets and People when the World Feels Uncertain. There is a lot of uncertainty in today's world, and perhaps you know someone who is facing an unexpected and/or frightening turn of events. Perhaps, it's even you. Dealing with a sudden uncertainty is difficult enough for the humans involved, but what about the pets who may also get thrust into a new, scary reality? The site offers a number of helpful points for how anyone might handle such a situation. If you or someone you know is in an uncertain position in life, check out the information at: www.tinyurl.com/y9e32ra9. Anyone may face a sudden upset in their life, so the Mutts' page offers these ideas on how to be prepared. 1) Choose an alternate caregiver for your pets. Someone who will take responsibility for them in your absence. 2) Keep pet IDs (tags/microchips) up to date. 3) Prepare a "just in case" kit with pet food, vaccination records, feeding instructions, type of food, and contacts, such as your veterinarian. Maybe include a pet's favorite treat or a toy and/or blanket. This will help whoever takes over the care of your pets. If you are faced with a sudden change in your life and have no one to turn to for your pets' care, contact a local animal shelter for guidance. Also, https://PethelpFinder.org offers advice. Whatever you do, please do not abandon your pets to figure it out on their own.

Here are some upcoming pet adoption events and fundraisers in the area.

Saturday, March 21, Panera Bread at 3260 Niles Rd., St. Joseph, will donate 20% of net sales from 4-8 pm to Animal Aid. To participate online or on their app, enter the code FUND4U.

The Lincoln Township Public Library at 2099 John Beers Rd. in Stevensville, along with Animal Aid, will host a Kitten Shower on Saturday, April, 4 from 1-3pm. Kitties will be available for adoption (please fill out an application on the Animal Aid website beforehand), and also information on how to become a foster. We are heading into kitten season and so any donations to help provide for those babies are most welcome.

The annual Bid for Barks will take place on Saturday, April 25, at the DANK, 2651 Pipestone Rd., Benton Harbor, beginning at 5 pm. This year's theme is Rewind for Rescue. The event includes a live and silent (paper) auction, cash bar, buffet dinner, live music, and raffles. Also, a dog parade of pets looking for their new homes will take place. Proceeds benefit Berrien County Animal Services and area rescues. Tickets may be purchased at https://bidforbarks2.com.

Fuzzybutz Pet Bakery in downtown St. Joseph is still holding pet adoptions on Sundays from 1-3 pm.

Easter is fast approaching, and while folks don't purchase baby rabbits, chicks, and ducklings for gifts like they used to, please remember, if you are so inclined to buy them for pets, that those babies soon grow into adult animals that require special care and shelter. Be prepared for how to deal with them in the future.

Why is treating my hearing loss so important???

When we have hearing loss that is untreated (yes, even mild levels of hearing loss) it puts our brain under increased stress and cognitive load. This would be like driving down the highway at 65 MPH in 1st gear for an extended period. What do you think would happen to your engine? The same thing happens with our brain. Untreated hearing loss puts a constant strain on the brain that makes it work much harder. When we properly treat hearing loss with state-of-the-art amplification, coupled with brain games and other strategies, it helps reduce that overload on the brain.

What are symptoms of early hearing loss?

1. Tinnitus occurring in the ears
2. Difficulty hearing in background noise
3. Hearing but not understanding what is being said
4. Sensitivity to loud sounds
5. Listening fatigue

Most hearing loss will begin in the 3rd and 4th decade of life. This means getting your hearing tested in your mid 40's is important to establish a solid baseline and identify any hearing issues as soon as possible. While we know hearing loss will continue to progress in most cases, the sooner we begin proper medical treatment the more we hope to slow the progression of the hearing loss and its effect on our brain processing sound.

What are the consequences of untreated hearing loss?

1. Increased tinnitus
2. Increased cognitive load (extra stress on the brain)
3. Increased risk of a traumatic fall
4. Increased risk of mild cognitive impairment and/or dementia
5. Brain atrophy (shrinkage of the brain)

The #1 modifiable factor to reduce risk of dementia is treating untreated hearing loss. If you or someone you know is noticing symptoms of hearing loss, we encourage you to come in and get your hearing tested. Taking this first step is a great way to help keep you on the path to independence and good hearing health.

Professional Hearing Services and our staff are committed to providing exceptional hearing healthcare so give us a call! We would love to show what you have been missing. Call 888-675-9480 to make the appointment for a free hearing screening when you mention this column in MailMax.

Eau Claire Public Schools Seeks May 5 Bond for Facility Repairs, Millage Renewal

Eau Claire Public Schools voters will consider two ballot proposals on May 5: a $7.09 million bond to address critical building infrastructure needs and a renewal of the district's operational millage.

District officials say the bond proposal focuses primarily on replacing aging heating, ventilation and air conditioning (HVAC) systems and addressing necessary roofing repairs throughout the district.

Many of the current systems, particularly in the elementary school, have exceeded their expected lifespan by decades. School officials say aging equipment has led to inconsistent classroom temperatures, reduced air filtration and increasing emergency maintenance costs.

"Our HVAC system dates back to the 1950s and has reached the end of its life," said Superintendent Ann Cluff. "Right now we're essentially keeping it running with temporary fixes. Reliable heating and cooling systems might not sound exciting, but they make a huge difference in the learning environment. When classrooms are comfortable and systems work properly, students and staff can focus on learning instead of distractions."

District leaders say replacing the outdated systems will improve reliability and energy efficiency while reducing the need for costly emergency repairs.

Why the district says the bond is needed

The district identified several priorities the bond proposal would address:

System reliability: Replace heating and cooling units that frequently break down during peak seasons.

Energy efficiency: Install modern, high-efficiency HVAC systems expected to lower utility costs over time.

Reduced repair costs: Decrease the ongoing expense of maintaining obsolete equipment and sourcing outdated parts.

Financial impact

The proposed bond totals $7.09 million, estimated at 2.39 mills. District officials estimate the cost for the average homeowner would be approximately $22 per month.

District administrators say the bond proposal has been limited to essential infrastructure improvements and does not include additional expansion projects.

Operational millage renewal

In addition to the bond proposal, voters will also consider a renewal of the district's operational millage.

Operational millages in Michigan are approved by voters on a recurring basis and apply only to non-homestead properties, such as businesses, rental properties and second homes. The 18-mill operational millage does not apply to a primary residence.

School officials say the renewal is necessary to maintain current school operations and funding levels.

Additional information about the bond proposal, operational millage renewal and a tax calculator for residents is available at eauclaireps.com. Community members with questions are encouraged to contact the district office.

Eau Claire Public Schools serves students and families in Eau Claire and surrounding communities in Berrien County, Michigan. The district is committed to providing safe learning environments, strong academic programs and opportunities that prepare students for success in college, careers and community life.

Dave Says

It's a Hobby, Not an Investment

Dear Dave,

I'm single, and I work with a well-known, high-end retail company. Over the years, I've noticed that certain models of some watch brands appreciate incredibly over time. I've seen a few that have doubled, tripled and even quadrupled in value over the years. With this in mind, what do you think about the idea of select watches, including vintage watches, as part of my investment portfolio?

Adam

Dear Adam,

I've seen a few really nice watches in my day. Now, I even own a couple. But watches, no matter the brand or model, aren't what I'd consider to be an actual investment. Mutual funds are investments. Real estate and 401(k)s are investments. But watches? Not so much.

When you're talking about watches, what you're really talking about is collectibles. For example, I have a friend who has collected over 1,000 bottles of wine over the years. While the value on most of them has gone up, it's not part of his formal investment strategy.

So, if you've got your financial house in order, and by this, I mean you're debt-free, you've got an emergency fund of three to six months of expenses and you're putting money toward retirement, do some research, save up and go buy a very nice new, or vintage, watch. There's nothing wrong with that if watches are something you really enjoy. Just don't go crazy and buy a dozen, okay?

If you know your stuff in this area, that first purchase could launch you toward owning a fine collection of watches over the years. Some people do the same kind of things with cars, too. But whether you're talking about watches, cars or even baseball cards, treat them like what they are—consumption items. They're things you like and can afford to enjoy.

See what I'm saying, Adam? Things like that are hobbies, not real investments. But then, if they happen to go up in value over time, that's a nice added bonus, isn't it?

— Dave
